Registry is not corrupted Chances are you know that the Windows registry is where all your application files and system settings are kept. If that is the case, then you have to be a bit wary of what you might find during your search. Unfortunately, it is probably going to come to light that your Windows registry is running slower and more sluggish. Luckily, this is not necessarily bad. It depends on the amount of data, which you have written to the registry and the types of applications you have installed. If this is the case, and you do not know how to fix the error, one of the first things you are going to do is to download and install a registry cleaner tool. It will scan your system and try to clean up all the junk left over after a long term use of your computer. You should know that you cannot assign any value to high-level keys in the Windows registry, such as HKEY_CURRENT_USER and HKEY_CLASSES_ROOT. These keys store important system settings and data of every single user of 6a5afdab4c
