You can also try using the Windows version as a starting point for your own build, and then rework the code as you see fit. If you have a favourite, you can use MSBuild to build the C++ part, and then link them into a C# application. Building the C++ files is easy to do with MSBuild. The config file would be: c:\path\to\MSBuild\MSBuild.ExtensionPack.CSharp.CppTasks.CppInclude.targets or:
