Medal-Winning Canada Choir Will Visit Virginia Tech Thursday Share This The University Choir of Canada performs during the 55th annual Juno Awards at the Scotiabank Arena in Toronto on March 23, 2013. The choir is to perform at the University of Virginia on Thursday, April 4, 2013. (Photo by Chris Helgren/Toronto Star

Choir of Canada (UCC) visits Virginia Tech on Thursday, April 4, it will do so with more than a little more national hype than usual.
It is, after all, the reigning 65-year-old national champion, which is why it will be accompanied by a Canadian Symphony Orchestra. Founded in 1945, the UCC is the world's premier choir, with over 900 members and 6,000 members in the adult community. After winning the 2013 Canadian Gold Medal at the Junior Eurovision Song Contest held in Malta last September, it was time for the choir to perform in what is considered one of the world's finest concert halls: the Royal Albert Hall in London. UCC Director Charles Macri conducted his choir on this international stage, and the choir brought home a medal from the Eurovision Song Contest. Moreover, the choir's gold-medal-winning Eurovision performance was among the most-watched Canadian television programs of the year in Canada and has even been featured on YouTube on hundreds of channels. The UCC's 2013 performance at the Royal Albert Hall was introduced by Canadian broadcaster, Diana Swain, who earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Music in 1976. The choir has also been featured on CBC's Canadian Idol and reality competition show The Next Star.
